Another month has past the grass might actually be starting to grow now it's been an anomaly wet cold month., now daylight savings is here gives us time to get out after work for a hunt heard of a few people filling the freezers, mines still empty 🐾 will find something tonight, on that note if anyone's got any photos or story's they want shared on Facebook send them into the branch via Facebook or email to the club email address and we'll get them up . There's a couple of club hunts on the calendar now these are only as successful as we make them so keep an eye on the dates coming up, get in touch and come along meet some new people seen get amongst it.

Editorial

By now you should all have read the message from Real Journeys on their requirements for Transporting Firearms over Foveaux strait to Stewart Island. No doubt motivated by concerns regarding public safety.

I remember reading about Deer Cullers NZFS or Dept. Internal Affairs, boarding NZR Busses with their rifle over their shoulder going to and from their hunting blocks. Then there was photos of North Island NZDA Branches flying NAC to the South Island for a Tahr hunt with rifles in the cabin. As for myself I remember leaving the car outside Queenstown Police Stn. Calling in and telling the duty officer our plans then walking down the mall pack & rifle over ones shoulder to catch the ferry to Elfin Bay Stn and the Caples.

It was interesting to read in the terms that Real Journeys will take no responsibility for any damage or loss of the firearm while it's in their care. Interesting when it's in a locked container too which they have the Key. (Your locked solid wall rifle case going into a special container on the boat which is also locked by Real Journeys one assumes.) (Should/ must the holder of this key have a firearms licence?) Logically one would perhaps think so, then perhaps not, no such requirement regarding baggage handlers with airlines.

As for the no responsibility liability clause, how much water would it hold if the firearms were stolen? I remember an all care no responsibility clause on consignment notes issued by Transport Companies carting Stock over twenty years ago. The Judge threw that out and convicted the driver of the animal welfare issue. Hopefully no firearms will go missing to test who is responsible, the owner of the firearm, or the holder of the key to the container?

Then again Real Journeys could have just banned all firearms on their boats, they are not required to have to take them. They are just trying to cover themselves in an area of grey law.

Like it or not we are going to have further amendment to the Arms Act the bill is before Parliament as I write this. Would it be expecting too much for practical rules regarding transport of firearms to be included. The days of having them in the rear window of the ute are long gone. But if transporting your firearm by car on your own, can you leave the car to attend to the call of nature for instance, or do you have to take your firearm (carrying in public frowned on), or pee into a bottle in the car, and risk public exposure. After the 1992 amendment, smallbore shooters were advised to take their bolt (where possible) with them in their pocket when leaving their cars. But would this save them if vehicle, stolen or broken into? Not clear in the written law, all in grey interpretation. I can find no clarification regarding rules for transport of firearms in NZ in the current bill. This is being hurried through Parliament as was the 1992 Amendment that created the above situation. New law needs to take its time and be properly sorted out if it is not to create further problems, instead of solving them.

Please each and every one of you make your submission on this Bill.

It is expected that the price of one of hunters favourite foods, bacon will rise due to African Swine Fever decimating the pig population in Asia especially China. The news will be far worse for hunters if this disease reaches New Zealand. Then gets into the Wild Pig population. The mind boggles at possible measures to be taken to cull all the infected wild pigs, expect toxins to be used.

Doctor Len Butterfield was President of Southland Branch for a number of years during the 1960' and was a keen hunter both in New Zealand overseas and had a specially built trophy room in his home. When he died, his wife sold off his trophies but this Fallow head was left along with the Impala and Wildebeest trophies. The Fallow was bleached and had probably been shot in late velvet and stripped. Len had a bigger Fallow which was shot in the Mararoa and it if possible this one came from there as well. In the 1960's Southland Branch had a very good relationship with Bill Metherall who was the run holder and many branch trips where held in the Mararoa with transport being by a number of old trucks. The head skin on this trophy is from a Blue Mountains Fallow and the head was stained and mounted by local taxidermist and member Dennis Collins.
